

Course Diary for 2019

What is Thinking Partnerships?

Developed by Nancy Kline and Time to Think™ this is the step by step process for liberating the human mind to think for itself with unprecedented clarity, originality and rigour. This highly participatory course (2+1 days) teaches it in depth. You will participate both as Thinker (considering topics of your choice), and as Thinking Partner (practicing this elegant expertise). Along the way you will explore all Ten Components of a Thinking Environment™.

This profoundly impactful way of being in a partnership scenario is supported by a growing body of neuroscience studies that helps us to understand how and why the quality of one person's attention impacts on the quality of another person's thinking, on their decisions and actions.

What will you gain?

This way of being is regarded by many as an essential coaching and mentoring skill ideal for all those managing and leading people: the training and application of it is also a valuable personal development experience. This course equips you with skills that can apply in multiple contexts in both business and personal life. Essentially it improves communication and understanding on all levels.

Who is the course for?

Coaches, mentors, professional advisers, executives, managers, HR and OD professionals, health and other consultants; all those who want to become skilled in creating the ideal conditions in which thinking will flourish, and/ or to deepen existing skills. This unique course is highly participatory, professionally confidential, and teaches this process in depth.

(NB: This course is a prerequisite for the Time to Think Coaching Course)

Dates for 2019

27, 28 April and 11 May

12, 13 September and 25 October

Location: Tunbridge Wells

Cost: £840

What is the Foundation Course?

Interested in groups and the Thinking Environment?

The Foundation Course is a two-day programme allowing for maximum practice, thinking time and appreciation. You will be introduced to the Ten Components of a Thinking Environment™ and their eight group applications.

Together with participants we will explore Thinking Pairs, Dialogue, Rounds, Open Discussion, Meetings, the Council and Facilitation. Any of these applications will help you turn groups and organisations into Thinking Environments.

You will also see one Thinking Partnership demonstration in order to consider its importance for leaders in creating Thinking Environment™ cultures.

What will you gain?

This way of thinking clearly and constructively enables you to solve those messy problems in your work or personal life and take your thinking beyond expectations.

Who is this course for?

This course is suitable for existing and aspiring leaders, coaches, facilitators, those who wish to reconsider strategy for their business or their lives. Or for those who are interested in all things connected with how we use our brains. It will fire up your thinking muscles and help you take the next step.

(NB: This course is a prerequisite for the Facilitator Qualifying Course.)
